COMMENTARY

Market Review

- Emerging Europe underperformed global markets in February on speculation over slower Chinese growth. The conviction of investors was challenged by the Greek debt crisis, a weaker economic outlook for the EU, and heightened political tension in Turkey. These risks were reflected in the underperformance of Turkey and the outperformance of the Czech Republic.

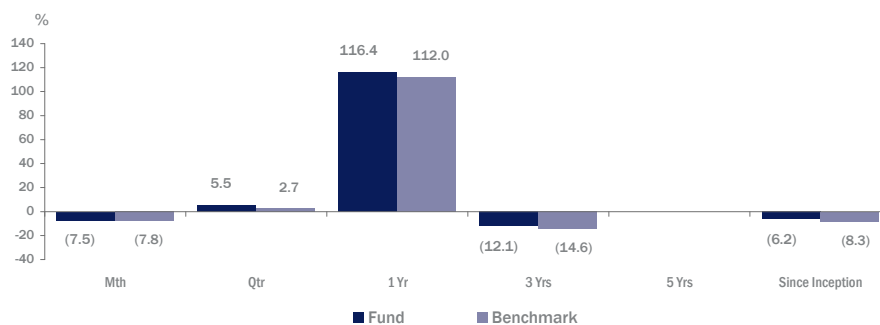

Fund Activity & Outlook

- We added to our position in Kazakh ferroalloy producer, ENRC, on improving stainless steel demand, rising ferrochrome prices, and evidence of building a credible business platform in Central Africa.

- We used the pullback in Turkey to add to our positions in Halkbank, which reported better than expected fourth quarter results, and the national flag carrier, Turkish Airlines, as its passenger traffic growth continues to exceed expectations. We trimmed our position in Sberbank, and exited Turkish holding company, Sabanci, to fund these purchases.
- The performance of emerging European markets will closely track investor conviction of a sustainable global recovery and its demand for commodities. The probability of early elections in Turkey is rising. We maintain our preference of Russia over central Europe.
